The Inaugural Centennial.

Bishop Porter's address was a frequent one. After dwelling on the general character of Washington and especially on the religious feelings which governed him as shown on the occasion of his inauguration when he came to this city in this very church, he alluded to the constitution of the

Then, when the state of business will permit, he will run over to London, probably in July, and return with Lady Dunscombe and his family in time for the opening of the season in the autumn.

In private life, the Sino-American ambassador will be found an interesting man. He is a good talker and is not a bad raconteur; but his manner is never than is manner in this respect. He has no corners to be knocked off and no corners to be knocked on. He does not wear his heart upon his sleeve, nor does he easily form strong friendships. He can stand on his dignity with a grand air. But, as a rule, he is courteous to everybody and thoroughgoing in his kindness.

the next winter was again upon the march into Missouri, and in February Major Bemis was made captain of the company. The succeeding spring they ascended the Mississippi river to the vicinity of Vicksburg. On the 1st of May they participated in the battle of Grason, which was really the beginning of the siege of Vicksburg. Major Bemis bore the first shot of the battle, began the siege. At 8 o'clock the morning of the 13th of May, Vicksburg was in the hands of the army. Major Bemis's regiment: took the advance movement on Back River bridge, and captured Vicksburg. After a "errand" of heavy engagement, the infantry advanced across an open field and captured the batteries falling back and then stormed the enemy's works. In this engagement, the regiment captured upwards of one thousand prisoners and regimental staff of colors. They took position in front of Vicksburg on the 11th and participated in the terrible battle of May 22nd. This was the most important action in which Major Bemis participated, immediately after the surrender of Vicksburg the regiment was sent to Yazoo, Miss., and upon arrival Major Bemis was ordered by General Lawler to take three companies of his regiment and take the position of the enemy in front. They were across the river, but on reaching a point of reeds of the same name died of the disease.

General Lee came among the prisoners and ordered the guards to "feed" them. It was dusk by this time. While he was in the prison, several times he had to crawl on his hands and knees to the rear and attend to their wounds. After Lee's surrender, the prisoners marched to the Union lines and soon sought out their own regiments, seeking to continue a life as a janitor or with their old captors. Lee was marched out at Fairfax Hall on the 23d of July, 1865, having been two years in the prison. Captain Saxon says: "I was in nineteen different battles. I never was wounded, and was only in the hospitals one day, and on account of this I was called the 'cain't get hurt' man." He carried home a few pieces of car rails from their American and the way they sang through the air was appalling. He could hear the song "Saxey" "Saxey" "Saxey." Captain Saxon said that he and McClellan's cavalry had been used through the war, and he carried it with him to the war of 1887 in which Company A participated. Captain Saxon gives the name of the first construction company as the 1st and 2d regiments. While he was marching as a prisoner he rode ranks, for several hours on morning, he noticed a company that was particularly well drilled and uniformed. They marched off to the rear during the day and struck into the forest of woods and in an hour or so after one of the guards turned and informed him that the company had been in an engagement and no man was to be seen. ## MONUMENT MATTERS.

MONUMENT, May 3, 1886.

The past week has been a stormy one. There has been a mixture of snow and rain, which will be of incalculable value to the crops now being planted. Ranchmen hereabouts say that the season is three weeks ahead of last year. The grass has grown to sufficient height to warrant cattle weathering through the spring storms without loss of the young stock. Every available piece of ground on the divide will be planted in either potatoes or grain and should the season be favorable, as we have every reason to now hope, there will be a larger crop marketed from the divide than in many years past.

The centennial inauguration was duly observed at Monument by appropriate exercises in the church. A special service was arranged for the day. The "Star Spangled Banner," "America," and other vocal selections were admirably rendered by the choir. Messrs. Wentworth and Brewer accompanied the singers with organ and cornet. The oration by Rev. C. E. De Long was especially deserving of mention. It was carefully prepared and was listened to with great attention by the audience. The subject was a history of Washington's life as a soldier and statesman. We regret not having space to record the entire address. In compliance with a request made by Mr. De Long, our business men closed their places of business during the religious service. In the evening the ladies of the church gave a social at the G. A. R. hall. There was music and a pleasant time generally. The monument band, invigorated by serenading the town. There is a decided improvement in the band and the boys should receive every encouragement as they have shown faithfulness under many difficulties and have surmounted the difficulties which add greatly to their credit.

Mary Lowe Dickinson's Lecture.

A reception was tendered Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson at the Congregational church yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Dickinson entertained the ladies present by an interesting account of the founding of the society, the King's Daughters, its work and mission. Refreshments were served to 100 persons. At the same place in the evening Mrs. Dickinson gave a delightful lecture on George Sand. The lecturer said: "In 1831 she wrote Rose et Blanche, with Jules Sandeau as co-author, under the pseudonym of Jules Sand, and the reception it found offered an opportunity for the immediate publication of a novel, Indiana, written by herself alone under the pseudonym of Geo. Sand. Mme. Duvivier, in 1833, published Leia, which caused her celebrity to rise to a sensation. The book touching on the delicate question of love and conjugal fidelity. George Sand built on the success of her own domestic peace. Her wild excursions, dressed as a man, to the cafes, the salons, the quarters, and theatres brought into her works the reality of common life, gave characters which have never been equalled. Mrs. Dickinson spoke of Mme. Sand's other early productions, in speaking of her intimate friendship with Chopin, she said: "George Sand found inspiration in Chopin's music and to whom are due the beautiful passages on music in her later works." Mrs. Dickinson spoke very graphically of the authors relations with Lamartine, Michelet, the republican, and Pierre Leroux; of the fierce way in which she drew her life into politics, psychology and play-acting. She concluded, the lecturer, though it is the masterpiece of Mme. Duvivier. The book acknowledging the want of God, revealed a thirst for truth and reality. A futile search after years of toil. Rousseau's works lay at the basis of her mental stature, destroying a religious belief and indirectly causing years of mental anguish.

The New Bank Block.

The contract for the work on the new bank block has been let to Grace Griffith & Elyce of Chicago. This is a firm that has been operating in this western country for some time, having built the Rock Island round house in this city. The particulars of the contract are not made public, but it is known that it does not include the heating, elevator and plumbing. One of the directors states, however, that when completed the building will have cost $15,000. The contractors are compelled to give bonds for the completion of the work in the sum of $40,000. The only local builder who bid was Mr. S. S. Sessions. By the terms of the bid building is to be completed within ten months. The firm proposes to do the greater part of its own work, entering very few sub-contracts, but the work will be done by local mechanics as far as possible. The work of excavating for the foundations was begun yesterday by Mr. Thomas Ore, and the building will be rapidly pushed to completion.

The plans of the new building as accepted by the board of directors change the external appearance of the building from the picture printed in the New Year's edition of the GAZETTE. The greatest change was in the cornice at the top. The building will be four stories in height and built of brown stone from the Flying Rock quarries on the line of the Elgin road and from the Red Rock canon quarries at Colorado City. In finish the building will be the handsomest in the state. The stockholders of the bank block company who live in this city are Mr. C. C. Eggerman, Mr. J. R. Ehrlich, Mr. W. F. Anderson, Mr. C. A.

Laves, Jr., Mr. Irving Bowler, Mr. S. J. Crowell, and Mr. C. F. Humphrey. A majority of the foreign stockholders are men who are in excess in the Elgin road.

When completed the building will be paid for as the company is not bonded and no mortgages put upon the building.

She returned to this city several weeks ago fully aware that the disease had taken such a firm hold upon her that she could not recover. She was willing to die among her friends. Mrs. Mainka will be pleasantly remembered by many citizens as having assisted in getting up an amateur performance of Gilbert & Sullivan's opera "Pinafore." The funerals services were held from the residence of Mrs. A. G. Broopa, on North Nevada avenue, at 10 o'clock Monday morning, with interment at Evergreen cemetery.

The plan of the Colorado City glass works will be completed by the end of the week, and on Monday the first will be started in the furnaces. General Charles Adams returned on Tuesday from the east, bringing with him 58 German glass blowers, who have recently been working at La Salle. They came over the Rock Island and took the glass company $800 to pay the fares. The workmen, after examining the new plant, are sure that it is the most complete of any they have ever seen.
